150th BIRTHDAY

Nowhere across the broad span of mutual interests and understanding between the two great nations of Canada and the United States, is there a more cordial and friendly relationship than that which has existed between the peoples of Woodstock, New Bruns-

As neighboring towns, we have enjoyed a hospitable relationship. We have worked together side by side in times of adversity, we have played together side by side on happier occasions. We have competed together in friendly rivalry, we have mingled together to worship and to enjoy the social intercourse of fraternal, which has existed between the peoples of Woodstock, New Brunswick and Houlton, Maine over the past 150 years.

It was the good fortune of our people on this side of the line to be able to shelter and befriend the hardy young pioneers who came to settle your village a century and a half ago; in the years between there have been countless evidences of your gratitude for this early demonstration of our friendship.

We count it as one of the happier blessings of our community life that we have, for so long, had such a warm and intimate association with the people of our neighboring town across the border; we believe too, that our affection and esteem is returned in generous measure by your good citizens.

So, with a warm sense of appreciation for the rewarding friendliness that endures between our two fine communities, we are happy to pay our respects and extend our congratulations to our good neighbors of Houlton at this time of their Sesquicentennial observance. As many of our people join in celebrating with you, we sincerely wish for your town many, many more years of distinguished life . . . which we hope to share in equal measure with the past.
