

The Girls, Too, Had Championship Basketball Teams

looking forward, anticipating an ample remuneration for his labor; daily witnessing the progress of vegetation, from the tender blade to the ear, then the full corn and ripe fruit; and then comes the autumnal gathering.

"Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield,

Their furrow of the stubborn glebe has broken;

How jocund did they drive their team afield,

How bowed the wood beneath their sturdy stroke.

Let not ambition mock their useful toil,

Their homely joys and destiny obscure;

Nor grandeur hear with a disdainful smile,

The short and simple annal of the poor."

The writer conforming to dates, in chronological order, must submit to many abrupt transitions, from the moral, sentimental and religious, to secular occurrences of business life.

In the summer Ebenezer Warner built a mill-dam and saw-mill, near his residence at the falls of the south branch of the creek, it being a valuable privilege, two miles above A. Putnam's mill, at the village.

In 1821 Mr. Timothy Frisbie, formerly of Fryeburg, Me., removed to Houlton from the Province of N. B., where he was, by death, bereaved of an affectionate companion, leaving a husband and family of sons and daughters to mourn their irreparable loss. The family of Mr. Frisbie now constitutes a portion of the most influential and enterprising inhabitants of Houlton and vicinity where they are settled.

In July Messrs. Holman Cary, Thomas Shaw and Haskell Cary left New Salem for Houlton to visit their friends and see the country.

EARLY HISTORY of HOULTON

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Reprinted verbatim in the exact form in which it appeared in the Aroostook Pioneer, July 16, 1858. Chapter eleven and twelve, which preceded this chapter, had mainly to do with correspondence between Rev. Alpheus Harding of New Salem and Deacon Samuel Kendall of Houlton and contained a "true portrait of the feelings and desires which were entertained and cherished by the Rev. Harding and the members of the church of New Salem toward the scattered sheep who were, and had been for years, in the wilderness without a shepherd." Having had no historical significance, it has been omitted from this chronicle.—Ed.

Moral and Cultural Improvement Society

February 7, 1821, a society was organized by the name of Instructive Companies, the object of which was moral and literary improvement. The members were as follows: Samuel Kendall Jr., Romaine L. Putnam, Joshua G. Kendall, Edwin Townsend, Edmund Coan, Stern Putnam, Jacob Harward, and Joseph Kendall. They were constitutionally bound to meet every Thursday evening from September to March. During the summer they were to meet the last Thursday in each month. This might be considered a small beginning, nevertheless there was an apparent improvement in the several compositions of the members during the operation of the society; but soon our president moved to Woodstock, where he rendered himself useful as a teacher, and this society lost its organization. The crowding cares and duties, inseparably connected with our laborious situation soon proved that our life did not consist in the rhyme and measure of poetry. Falling trees, chopping the logs and piling them together, burning and clearing off the brands, was no mere fancy work for delicate hands frilled bosoms; still the farmer, perhaps, realizes as much satisfaction and enjoyment, as the literary and professional classes of men whose cares and duties are usually augmented by their increased responsibilities, if conscientious in the discharge of their obligations, while the husbandman engages in his vocation preparing the soil in the opening spring sowing the variety of seeds, planting fruit trees, cultivating the garden, uniting the esculent with the ornamental,

At The House - To - House Salesman . . .

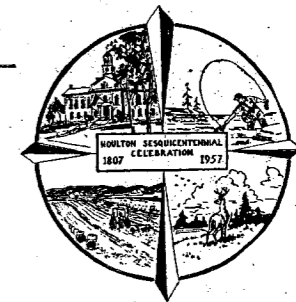

When Grandma was a little girl the family looked forward to the periodical visits from the man with his pack of merchandise on his back. He carried such essentials as needles, pins, pieces of silk goods, ribbons, rick-rack. On occasion Grandma splurged and bought little items she wished to employ as gifts to dear ones.

TODAY . . . the modern housewife has all the advantages of selections in the greater modern store . . . with its vast buying facilities . . . such as M. H. FISHMAN CO. can offer her. For over 25 years we have been a part of the HOULTON scene . . . and we are very proud of this association.
